

Preparation

Before the puppy arrives, it's important to prepare your home. This includes setting up a quiet space for the puppy, ensuring you have all the necessary supplies like food, water, and bedding, and making sure everyone in the household is ready to welcome the new addition. It's also a good idea to consult with your veterinarian about any specific care instructions.

Arrival Day

On the day the puppy arrives, take time to get to know it. Allow the puppy to explore its new environment at its own pace. Spend some quality time with the puppy, offering gentle petting and talking to it in a calm voice. Remember to keep the experience positive and stress-free for both of you.

Next Steps

After the initial adjustment period, focus on building a strong bond with your puppy. Continue with regular vet check-ups and follow any advice from your vet regarding diet, exercise, and training. Socialization is key, so expose the puppy to various environments and people in a safe and controlled manner.
